LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

The Upper Chamber—Grace, Turn—Labour
The Members Take the Floor—Suffragists and Ministers—Decadence of Claret.

WESTMINSTER, March 28.

The duty of an Opposition is to oppose. Whoever among political leaders obeys a maxim so immoral is surely more politicians than statesmen; and the difference between a politician and a statesman is that the one subordinates his country to his own or his party's interests, while the other is ever ready to sacrifice his personal welfare for the good of his country, and to prepare to defend his principles and his countrymen against the attacks of his enemies. The speeches of Mr. Winston Churchill, Mr. Lloyd George, and Mr. Birrell, following in quick succession, made it unmistakably clear that Ministers are not to be turned aside from ordinary constitutional courses by noisy threats of armed revolution. Such a one, whatever may be his other claims to statesmanship, is Mr. C. G. Wade, leader of the Liberal party in the State Parliament. It is to him I wish, through the columns of the "Herald," to say something in recognition of his claims to the gratitude, not of Liberals alone, but of all who like their politics clean, and who have, at least, the right to expect them to be so. That this valuation of his services is to a certain extent justified. Of course, matters are not so right in the end. The moving of his orders, puts up the backs of his officers, and drives them into an attitude of open revolt. The Orangemen of Ulster and their accomplices in the Unionist ranks on this side of the Channel have counted upon immunity by reason of political sympathy or military measures. The demonstration of last week is to a certain extent justified. Of course, matters are not so right in the end. The moving of his hundred officers, agreed on by political strategy in both Houses of Parliament, will not prevent the Government from successfully carrying out their duty in Ulster. But it is an awkward incident, none the less regrettable because due to blunder in a friendly quarter.

The angry debate which on Monday night stretched from half-past eleven, the siren and closing of the House of Commons, was remarkable for a declaration deliberately made by the leader of the party accustomed to arrogate to themselves the championship of law and order. "Nothing can save the Army," said Mr. Bonar Law, "except a clear declaration on the part of the Government that officers and men will not be compelled to engage in civil war against their will." This was a declaration of war against their will. The analogy is obvious. If officers and men in the army in Ireland are individually to put down open rebellion in Ulster, their comrades brought in to support civil forces in battling with armed strikers have equal rights to consult their conscience and their convictions, and to lay down their arms.

A profound sensation was created in the House of Commons on Tuesday night by a simple statement made by Mr. J. H. Thomas, the organising secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. On behalf of the four hundred thousand railwaymen that compose the union notes had, he said, been given to the whole of the railway companies in the United Kingdom, and the result of the warning was that a general strike would be declared on November 1 next. If he, as leader of the men, were to follow the example of Sir Edward Carson, approved by the whole force of the Conservative party, he would tell them that the railway managers would in all probability resist their demands, and that in order to prepare for the worst they must organise their forces, to which end the half million capital possessed by the union could be used to provide arms and ammunition.

It would even seem that the very question whether Tommy Atkins, whose conscientious sympathies are with his own class as fully as are General Gough with his, would not be justified in refusing to shoot down the men on strike. The perfection of the analogy was instantly perceived, and its grave possibilities realised by the crowded house.

Mr. Wade may be said, as was observed by a certain historical personage, that he has never cultivated those arts which add to the value of a favour, and take away the sting of a refusal. His "Yes" is yes and his "No" is no, nor is there any middle ground.

With him there is neither equivocation nor qualification.

When you get his answer you know exactly where you are, and where he stands. I once heard a member of the Assembly make a very simple but significant remark: "Wade," he said, "is too straight to be a successful politician."

It was a striking but unconscious censure on the political morality of the time. No less striking testimony to the same intent.

Mr. Wade is a standing protest against the popular method of translating it into war against their will. The analogy is clear.

Mr. Wade allowed himself to be drawn into the siren and the closing of the House of Commons, and the result of the siren and the show was disengaged. With self-reliance We judge our neighbours.

Not understood.

Mr. Wade allowed himself to be drawn into public life by an overwhelming sense of public duty. He knew the sacrifice would be great, but he called upon to make. He entered it at a time when some of the ablest men in the State Legislature were about to leave for the largest series of assemblies in America, and even when it could even then be foreseen, the rights of the States were likely to be invaded by the higher Parliamentary authority. From the day of his election to the Legislative Assembly over 13 years ago a recruiting schooner was surrounded and cut off, not far from the capital, and every soul aboard murdered. Attempted of the same kind.

It was through it that he grew strong.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

The question of today, of tomorrow, and of every day, is,

HAVE YOU USED PEARY SOAP? You have not, you have not done your duty by your skin and complexion. On the other hand—that is, on both hands, and on the feet, and on the skin generally—you HAVE used PEARS; you can feel happy, for you will have done the best that possibly can be done for the skin's health and beauty. There can be no question about it.

PEARS has been making beautiful complexion for nearly 200 years.

uncomfortable houses, pocket handbags, slippers, unlighted parks, or ugly streets, such as William-street or Elizabeth-street. If this spirit is inculcated a great deal of money and labour will be saved in remedying the mistakes of the past. But in so doing a spirit will be cultivated which will prevent the commission of similar mistakes.

LIGHT FOR THE BLIND.

No one who knew well the name of "A Person" at the height of his activity—only a few years ago—when he was starting the "Daily Express," the "Royal Magazine," "Pearson's," and half a dozen other periodicals besides, when he bought the "Standard" and when rumour even had it that he was likely to buy the London "Times"—no one could have dreamt that only a few years later he would receive a circular signed by Cyril Arthur Pearson as a blind man appealing for the blind. For some years past Mr. Pearson's name has been heard less frequently than that of old, and an increasing circle of friends has seen the shadow that was hanging over him; he is now almost totally blind. And in that extremity he has turned the great powers and energy, which for a few short years were part of the talk of the world, to the service of the blind. The need which most appeals to him, naturally, is the need of the blind man for books. And for that reason he is devoted to the upholding and extension of an institution, one of whose chief objects is to print and distribute those books, the National Institute for the Blind in London. The lot of the blind is much more bearable than it used to be by the invention of methods which enable them to read. But if it be for a moment reckoned how many millions of books, magazines, and newspapers are necessary in the ordinary life of a city of 200,000 inhabitants, it may be calculated that an enormous output of Braille would be required to supply even the 18,000 persons who are blind, or partially blind, in Great Britain alone. Endless Braille is an expensive process, and unfortunately the average blind person cannot take advantage of the whole number of books actually printed, because there are three different types of Braille, and it is rarely that a student of it can read more than one of them. This fact alone enormously narrows the literary horizon of the blind, and it cannot be remedied by expecting them to learn the three alphabets.

When a man's sole connecting link with the literary world is the first three of his left hand, he cannot expect too much of that finger. If he does, it will be apt to refuse work. Even the ordinary straightforward reading of the alphabet to which a blind man is accustomed is limited by the lead which that sensitive finger will convey to him. After a long journey over the numbered tops and valleys of the Braille alphabet, the first word he sometimes becomes acquainted with is safety of life at sea, also the Mail Subsidies Bill.

The latter measure shows a decrease from 1,000,000 marks to 1,200,000 marks, the reduction being due to the Hamburg America Company and the Norddeutscher Lloyd continuing their Far Eastern services without subsidies, and the abandonment of the Norddeutsche Lloyd's Australian service.

GERMAN MAIL SUBSIDIES.

BERLIN, May 1.

The Reichstag last night read the first time a bill embodying the international agreement in regard to safety of life at sea, also the Mail Subsidies Bill.

The former measure shows a decrease from 1,000,000 marks to 1,200,000 marks, the reduction being due to the Hamburg America Company and the Norddeutscher Lloyd continuing their Far Eastern services without subsidies, and the abandonment of the Norddeutsche Lloyd's Australian service.

GERMAN AIRSHIPS.

ANOTHER MISHAP.

BERLIN, May 1.

The German Schutte-Lanz airship, the most interesting recent event in the field of aviation, was destroyed for the army, probably by fire, constructed for the army, and half-an-hour to start the War Office test conditions.

It was compelled to land through losing gas, and struck the ground so heavily that it was partly wrecked.

The predecessor of this airship, the Schutte-Lanz I., was completely wrecked on July 17 of last year.
